Igor loved partying and a self-destructive life style until one day his wealthy father cut his credit cards into pieces and assigned him an internship at a shabby police station.

Silver Spoon is the police series that took Russia by storm portraying the hopeless young brat Igor and his transformation into a clever police officer. From the moment Igor walks through the doors to the police station his life is made a misery by his co-workers and superiors. Especially as he had tried to bribe his way out of a drunk driving charge a couple of days beforehand. Instead of letting it get to him, Igor rises to the challenge and soon discovers that he has a real talent for police work. But the story takes a serious twist when evidence from his mother's mysterious death leads back to his father.
